In addition to the programs listed here, Temple University’s School of Media and Communication offers summer abroad programs in various locations. Please visit the Study Away Office website (http://smc.temple.edu/studyaway) for more information.
Temple University’s summer study abroad offerings include programs based at our international campuses in Rome and Tokyo, as well as programs around the world led by Temple University faculty. Our summer programs serve a variety of needs — whether you are looking to take courses in your major or minor, enhance your general studies, or acquire language skills, we hope that one of our programs will allow you to achieve your academic goals. Each of our programs is quite distinct; some allow you to select from a broad range of courses, while others are much more specialized, focusing on one or two disciplines. New programs are created each year, so we encourage you to get a glimpse of our programs in this brochure and then visit our website for detailed up-to-date information. And, of course, please contact us with any questions — we look forward to working with you.

All programs are open to students from any U.S. college or university. Visiting students may find information about accreditation and transfer of credits on page 12.

SALVADOR, BRAZIL

Afro-Brazilian Culture and Popular Brazilian Music

Level: Undergraduate

Courses: 6 credits in Latin American Studies

Dates: Early July to mid-August

Housing: Apartments

Study Afro-Brazilian culture, civilization and music in Salvador, Bahia, a vigorous city of nearly three million inhabitants in northeastern Brazil. Salvador, the first capital of Brazil, is situated between green tropical hills and broad beaches along the Atlantic Ocean and the Bay of All Saints. Salvador was the earliest and most important point of entry for Africans taken to Brazil during the Atlantic slave trade. As a result, this region is a major repository of African traditions and an important center for contemporary developments in Afro-Brazilian culture. You will enroll in two courses taught in English: Afro-Brazilian Culture and Popular Music in Brazil. In addition to the two courses, the program includes non-credit Portuguese language instruction during the first half of the program and the opportunity to participate in dance, cooking and capoeira workshops. Weekly field trips both in and around the city expose you to daily life in Salvador, as well as to the many vibrant cultural sites of the area. You will meet and interact with a range of traditional leaders, community activists, artists and musicians.

SAN JOSÉ AND UPALA, COSTA RICA

Public Health and Development

Level: Undergraduate and Graduate

Courses: 6 credits in Public Health

Dates: Mid-May to late June

Housing: Host family in San José and Upala; modest bed and breakfast/hotel during program excursions

Whether your background is in health, medicine, social work, political science, psychology, sociology, economics or international studies, this program offers a unique opportunity to see and experience a developing country’s health concerns first hand. Costa Rica has one of the oldest and best primary health care systems, providing basic primary care to 90 percent of its citizens, although coverage for immigrant populations remains a problem. During the first two weeks, you will get an in-depth introduction to Costa Rica’s health care system through lectures and site visits to hospitals, clinics and health-related organizations in the San José area and participate in intensive Spanish language training appropriate for your level. During the following three weeks, you will work with local community groups in the Alajuela region to design and implement public health campaigns on topics of the community’s choice. Possible topics include health concerns among the Nicaraguan immigrant community such as domestic violence, family communications, teen pregnancy, HIV/AIDS, dengue fever, and perhaps type-II diabetes. You will spend the final week of the program back in San José, where you will present on your activities in the rural community and finish writing your final paper. This work is intended to serve as the basis for student presentations at conferences. If you are an adventurous student looking for an exciting, realistic experience in Central America, this could be the program for you.

PARIS, FRANCE
French Language at the Sorbonne

Level: Undergraduate
Dates:
Four-week program (4 credits in French): Early July to early August*
Six-week program (6 credits in French): Early July to mid-August*
Housing: Options include homestay, residence hall or pension

Spend an unforgettable summer in Paris studying French at the Sorbonne. Through the program, you will have the opportunity to develop language skills at one of the world’s great universities. Sorbonne language courses are designed to fit individual needs; whether you are a student with basic French or a student with more experience, you will enroll in a course appropriate for your language level. The course includes a phonetics laboratory component which will guide you in honing your pronunciation skills, and as a supplement to classroom instruction, you will have the opportunity to attend optional lectures on various aspects of French life. Outside of the classroom, you will have ample time to explore Paris, using your French in a variety of real-world settings. Whether you are having dinner at a lively café, taking part in a Bastille Day celebration, cheering on cyclists in the Tour de France, or attending one of the various music, theater, dance or film festivals, Paris is alive with activity during the summer.

LEIPZIG, GERMANY
Intensive German Language

Level: Undergraduate
Courses: 4 credits in German
Dates: Early June to early July*
Housing: University residence halls

Take your language skills to the next level by participating in Temple’s intensive German language program in Leipzig. The four-week program is designed for undergraduates who have completed at least one semester of university-level German. You will spend the first few days of the program in Berlin and then travel to the Herder Institut of the University of Leipzig, a school with over 50 years of excellence in advancing German language skills and teaching about German culture and civilization. Faculty from the Herder Institut will teach you in a course that reflects your German language level. You can expect to further your language skills through the group project component, during which you will conduct research outside of the classroom on a topic of interest such as music in Leipzig, German soccer, or the Peaceful Revolution. Located in the heart of Europe in the former East Germany, Leipzig has a population of more than 500,000 and is known as a city of music, the arts, science and learning. Dr. Anthony Waskie, a Temple University faculty member and your on-site program director, will lead several excursions and activities within Leipzig, and you will also have opportunities to explore the city on your own. Attending a Bach Music Festival concert, watching a German soccer match on a screen in one of the main squares, and taking in the magnificent architecture and historical monuments on a walk through the city are some favorite student activities in Leipzig. The Herder Institut also organizes optional day trips to locations such as Dresden, Weimar, Spreewald and Saxon Switzerland, which you may take advantage of at an additional cost.

Program Director: Dr. Anthony Waskie, Department of French, German, Italian and Slavic, Temple University, 215-204-5452, awaski01@temple.edu.

*General summer program dates are tentative and subject to change.
DHRANGADHRA, INDIA
Art, Culture and Religion
Level: Upper-level Undergraduate and Graduate
Courses: 6 credits in Anthropology or Asian Studies
Dates: Late May to late June*
Housing: Guest house

Conduct an anthropological study in the medieval desert town of Dhrangadhra, Gujarat during Temple’s four-week summer program. The program is intended to investigate religious and artistic traditions, both ancient and contemporary, and is designed for upper-level undergraduate and graduate students. The mode of study is highly experiential and combines workshops, field trips and short apprenticeships. As a program participant, you will conduct an independent field research project, focusing on an area of personal academic interest, within and around Dhrangadhra, a town with a population of 100,000. Students have chosen to study many topics, including but not limited to: gender roles in theatrical performance; history and significance of Hindu gods and goddesses; traditional dance; Indian music composition; the art of mendhi; the sacredness of cows; and disability. Study is supervised by Dr. Jayasinhji Jhala, associate professor of anthropology at Temple University, whose lectures provide context for your experience and research. Local academics, performers, artists, religious leaders, and interpreters also serve as resources throughout the program. As this is an experiential learning opportunity, students with technical skills such as video making and photography; studio skills such as painting, sculpture and jewelry making; or performance skills in dance, music, theater or yoga, are encouraged to apply.

Program Director: Dr. Jayasinhji Jhala, Department of Anthropology, Temple University, jjhala@temple.edu.

*General summer program dates are tentative and subject to change.

ACCRÁ, GHANA
West African Civilization and Aesthetics
Level: Undergraduate and Graduate
Courses: 6 credits in African American Studies
Dates: Early July to mid-August
Housing: University residence halls

Explore classical and contemporary African history, politics, literature, music, dance and theater through academic study and personal cultural experiences in Ghana this summer. Learn about the origins of several major West African civilizations from ancient to contemporary times through in-class study and excursions to sites within and beyond Accra; particular emphasis is placed on the medieval empires of Ghana, Mali and Songhai and on topics most relevant to the program location including the transatlantic slave trade, the impact of colonialism, independence and current issues. You will also explore the philosophical, cultural and aesthetic expressions of African peoples on the continent, and their impact on the communities and artistic expressions of Africans in the United States and the Caribbean. Lectures and readings, as well as observation of and participation in traditional and contemporary artistic performances and arts and crafts, are integrated into the curriculum. The courses, taught by Dr. Niambi M. Carter and Dr. Iyelli Ichile of Temple University, are supplemented by lectures given by faculty members from the University of Ghana in Legon. In addition to your day-to-day exploration of Accra, you will visit numerous historic and cultural sites such as the ancient slave castles at Cape Coast and Elmina, the W.E.B. DuBois and Kwame Nkrumah Mausoleums, The National Theater, and traditional markets. The program is based at the University of Ghana, Legon-Accra. Accra, the capital of Ghana, is one of the largest administrative and commercial centers in West Africa.

Program Director: Dr. Niambi Carter, Department of African American Studies, Temple University, niambi.carter@temple.edu.
ROME, ITALY

Rome Summer Session

Level: Undergraduate
Courses: 6–8 credits in various disciplines; see website for details
Dates: Late May to early July*
Housing: Options include apartments, homestays or independent housing

Use the Eternal City as your classroom this summer. In addition to a semester study abroad program, Temple University Rome offers a six-week undergraduate summer session. You will enroll in two courses, selected from offerings in art, art history, business, classics, criminal justice, dance, English, geography and urban studies, history, Italian language and sociology. Internship opportunities are also available. With the exception of Italian language courses, all instruction is in English. A feature of the Temple Rome summer program is frequent, on-site instruction for many of the courses, enabling you to study firsthand the sites, artistic treasures, traditions and business practices associated with the people and history of Italy. These visits will bring academic subjects to life and further expose you to daily life in Rome. From wandering the narrow cobblestone streets of Trastevere, to buying food from your favorite vendor at the Trionfale Market, to seeing art and architecture up close and personal, Rome offers an exciting environment for exploration during the summer. Also included in the program is a day-long excursion during which you will explore Todi, a medieval hilltown in Umbria.

TEMPEL UNIVERSITY
ROME

Over its 45 year history, Temple Rome has maintained strong academic and cultural programming that takes advantage of the splendid resources Rome and Italy have to offer. Programs are offered during the summer, fall and spring semesters and are housed in the Villa Caproni, a handsome building facing the Tiber River in the heart of Rome, just north of Piazza del Popolo and within short walking distance of the Spanish Steps and the Borghese Gardens—an ideal setting for a study abroad center.
ROME, ITALY

Rome Graduate Seminar in Aesthetics and Cultural Studies:
Vision and Rationality

Level: Graduate
Course: 6 credits in English or Art History
Dates: Early June through early July*
Housing: Options include apartments or independent housing

Temple University Rome offers a four-week graduate seminar designed to bring together the disciplines of aesthetics and cultural studies. In its interdisciplinary thrust, the six-credit seminar is intended to serve as a foundation for advanced study in the human sciences and to reflect the most current trends of thought in postmodern culture. The seminar focuses on the troubled relation between perception and cognition in three historical moments of Western culture: the Renaissance and the birth of single point perspective; the Baroque and Counter-Reformation; and the postmodern critique of Enlightenment rationality. You will speculate about how our culture has been shaped by collaboration and conflict among visual, visionary, ideological and rational ways of knowing the world. The scope of inquiry embraces literary, philosophical, painterly and cinematic texts. The seminar, conducted in English, entails an intensive program of class work, field trips and guest lectures, and the city of Rome is used extensively as a resource. Graduate and post-doctoral students in fields such as literature, film studies, philosophy, art and social theory are welcome to apply.

Program Director: Dr. Alan Singer, Department of English, Temple University, 215-204-7563, alansinger00@comcast.net.

ARTENA, ITALY

Excavation of the Roman Villa in Artena

Level: Undergraduate and Graduate
Course: 6 undergraduate credits in Art History; 3 graduate credits in Art History
Dates: Early July through early August*
Housing: Small, modest hotel

Learn the techniques of archaeological fieldwork by participating in the excavation of a Roman villa in Artena, a small hill town approximately 40 miles southeast of Rome. The on-going excavation, under the direction of Temple University Rome faculty member and archaeologist Jan Gadeyne and his colleague Cécile Brouillard, has revealed substantial remains of a Roman villa and other buildings that existed from the 4th century BCE until at least the 7th century CE. The excavation, designed for undergraduates and graduate students, includes learning how to read stratigraphies, artifacts and building fragments in order to reconstruct the development of the site in time and place. You will actively be part of the excavation process “from the pickaxe to the pencil,” learning to collect, describe, identify and draw archaeological evidence. You will be required to keep a journal in which you record your experiences and observations, and scholarly literature will assist you in contextualizing the site. Weekly excursions to sites and museums nearby are designed to understand better the archaeological remains and artifacts in the broader context of the material culture of central Italy.

For further information, please contact:
Education Abroad, 215-204-0720 or study.abroad@temple.edu. Students with specific questions related to the excavation or local arrangements may contact Dr. Jan Gadeyne, jan.gadeyne@temple.edu.

ST. THOMAS PARISH, JAMAICA

International Service Learning

Level: Undergraduate and Graduate
Courses: 6 credits in Education/Urban Education
Dates: Late May to late June*
Housing: Residence hall-style facility or guest house

Explore history, culture, diversity, education and development in rural Jamaica through service learning based in the rural Parish of St. Thomas. You will enroll in two integrated courses that meet four times a week to address theories and practices of service learning and community development and participate in a service project designed in partnership with a community-based organization three days a week. Past participants have come from a variety of fields including the social and behavioral sciences; education; organizational development; counseling; public health; and agriculture. Students have worked with women’s cooperatives; students, counselors, and teachers in pre-primary and primary schools, as well as a school for pregnant teens; and agricultural organizations. Through service projects and coursework, they have explored gender issues, alternative energy, conflict and violence, fair trade marketing, sustainable agriculture, art education, school discipline, as well as their own roles in creating a more equitable world.

Tokyo, Japan

Tokyo Summer Semester

Level: Undergraduate
Courses: 9-13 credits in various disciplines; see website for details
Dates: Late May to early August*
Housing: Options include a residence hall or homestay

This program offers you the opportunity to choose from a range of courses, including several focusing on Asia, and to study alongside bilingual Japanese students in the heart of Tokyo. Courses are taught by distinguished faculty and, except for language courses, all instruction is in English. Japanese language is offered at all levels, beginning through advanced. Internships are also available. While you are there, you will be encouraged to take advantage of the many activities TUJ has to offer. Learn to make sushi or plant rice. Meet Japanese and other international students through the Culture Exchange program. Climb Mt. Fuji, go camping, take a day trip to Kamakura, or participate in a weekend excursion to Hiroshima — TUJ’s Office of Student Services organizes numerous activities, as well as day and overnight excursions to select locations every summer. You may also join a student organization or become involved in the local community by volunteering in Tokyo. The TUJ academic calendar includes three semesters: fall, spring and summer. Summer study abroad students can therefore expect to take advantage of the regular offerings and resources normally found during the academic year.

TOkyo, Japan
Japanese Media and Global Culture

Level: Undergraduate and Graduate Courses: 6 undergraduate credits in Journalism, Media Studies and Production, or Asian Studies; 6 graduate credits in Journalism
Dates: Early June to mid-July*
Housing: Residence hall

Learn about Japanese society and culture through the vehicle of different media: television, magazines, music, anime, manga, and film. During the program, each medium will be taken as a starting point to discuss important dimensions of Japanese culture, its history, and Japan’s relationship to the rest of the world. You will study major themes including race, ethnicity and gender dynamics in Japan, the construction of Japanese national/cultural identity, Japan’s position in a global context, and its involvement in processes of transnational cultural exchange. As the program focuses on experiential learning, you will participate in field trips to museums such as the Edo-Tokyo Museum and the Ghibli Museum; television studios such as Asahi or Fuji-TV; and numerous cultural sites. The program instructor, Dr. Fabienne Darling-Wolf, has conducted research on the Japanese media for more than 15 years and has lived in Japan at several points in time. To supplement her instruction, she will invite industry professionals such as media executives, producers and journalists to address the group. The program will be conducted in English and based at TUJ.

Program Director: Dr. Fabienne Darling-Wolf, Department of Journalism; Temple University, 215-204-2077, fdarling@temple.edu.

Oviedo, Spain
Spanish Language, Literature, Culture and Marketing

Level: Undergraduate
Courses: 6 credits in Spanish
Dates: Late June to late July*
Housing: Homestay

Enhance your Spanish language skills while discovering Oviedo, a small yet vibrant city in northwestern Spain. The five-week program is based at the University of Oviedo and is comprised of coursework in Spanish language, literature, cultural studies and marketing. Courses are taught by native Spanish professors of the University of Oviedo and faculty from Temple University. You will enroll for a total of six credits: three credits of Spanish language and three credits of Spanish literature, cultural studies, or marketing. You will spend the first several days exploring Madrid and its environs before traveling to Oviedo to begin classes. Oviedo, with a population of 220,000, is the capital of Asturias and a gateway for great scenery, outdoor activities and beaches. While the city has an impressive old-town center, museums and significant historic architectural sites, it is also a modern city featuring concerts, opera, theater and exhibitions.

Program Director: Dr. Jaime Durán, Department of Spanish and Portuguese, Temple University, jduran@temple.edu.
London, United Kingdom

London: The City in English Literature

Level: Undergraduate
Courses: 6 undergraduate credits in English
Dates: Late June through July*
Housing: Residence halls

Bring your studies of English literature to life in London. London has always played a central role in the life of Great Britain, in its politics, its economy, and its imagination. From the opening of Chaucer’s Canterbury Tales at the Tabard Inn to the multi-cultural North London of Zadie Smith’s White Teeth, it is difficult to find an important English author who does not turn to London, even if only to criticize it, as in William Wordsworth’s The Prelude. For English majors and non-majors interested in the arts more broadly, London offers an unparalleled place to study English literature and culture, both for its rich history and its contemporary vibrancy as one of the truly global cities of the world. It is particularly rich in theater, from the National Theatre to the Globe to smaller, cutting edge companies. The program is designed to make the best use of London, with classes meeting regularly on-site in the city.

Program Director: Dr. Steven Newman, Department of English, Temple University, snewman@temple.edu.

York, United Kingdom

Politics and Political Economy in Britain

- Level: Undergraduate
- Courses: 6 credits in Political Science or 3 credits in Political Science plus 3 credits in Economics or History
- Dates: Early July to mid-August*
- Housing: University residence halls (flats)

Study politics & political economy in the North of England. Yorkshire’s remarkable economic and political history and its people’s adaptation to a post-industrial, multi-cultural world make this an excellent place to understand Britain—and offer striking points of comparison for Americans in a post-imperial, globalized world. Learn from the political parties about their preparations for the General Election, as well as from others working for change outside the political system. Explore the politics of industrial history at, for example, a working 19th century water mill, a 300 meter deep coal mine museum, and a classic textiles town recently transformed into an upscale arts center. Hear about the politics of British identity from local organizers of Britain’s ever-changing immigrant communities. Visit the farming communities that inspired classic English literature and now debate the alternative merits of ‘fracking’ for new natural gas and turning their fields over to wind turbines. Learn about the triangular trade with America of slaves, cotton, sugar, and manufactures—and visit the home of country’s leading anti-slavery campaigner. Learn how the great manufacturing cities of Manchester and Leeds reinvented themselves as sites of cultural and media production—and have given the world some of the best popular (and obscure) music of the past forty years. In addition to brief lectures and longer seminar discussions, guest speakers, site visits and research trips will be woven into the curriculum. The program is based on the campus of the University of York, just outside one of the country’s most historic and beautiful towns.

United Kingdom

Tyler School of Art Workshops

- Level: Undergraduate and Graduate
- Courses: 6 undergraduate credits/3 graduate credits in Crafts
- Location and Dates: Vary according to program and year
- Housing: Residence halls and small hotels

Tyler School of Art’s Craft Department offers international workshops directed towards art majors with one year of studio experience beyond the freshman level. The programs emphasize the creation of artwork based on your cross-cultural experiences abroad; your travel and research experiences will be utilized as source material for the creation of your finished work. Access to local degree exhibitions and artist/educators, excursions, and museum visits supplement the curriculum.

Program Director: Chad Curtis, Crafts Department, Tyler School of Art, Temple University, 215-777-9168, chad.curtis@temple.edu.

- Art Workshop
  - The Tyler Art Workshop is a four-week studio art workshop in Scotland. Faculty from Glasgow School of Art and Tyler School of Art teach intensive workshop sessions in a variety of media.

  Program Director: Vickie Sedman, Crafts Department, Tyler School of Art, Temple University, 215-777-9209, vsedman@comcast.net.

- Metals Workshop
  - The Tyler Metals Workshop, designed for students with a concentration in metals and jewelry, is a three-and-a-half-week studio art workshop in London and Scotland, followed by a one-week workshop in the metals/jewelry/CAD-CAM studio at Tyler School of Art in Philadelphia.

  Program Director: Vickie Sedman, Crafts Department, Tyler School of Art, Temple University, 215-777-9209, vsedman@comcast.net.

Note: these programs are scheduled to run periodically. Contact the program directors or our office for details.
GENERAL ACADEMIC MATTERS

GenEd for Temple Students
Temple students who successfully complete a Temple summer study abroad program that is a minimum of 28 days abroad, and earn a minimum of three credits, automatically satisfy the World Society requirement of GenEd. The Temple Rome Summer Session also offers one course that fulfills the GenEd Arts requirement, and the Temple Japan Tokyo Summer Semester also offers some GenEd courses each term.

Accreditation
All Temple University study abroad programs, as an integral part of Temple University, are fully accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools.

Transcript and Transfer of Credits for Non-Temple Students
We advise you to discuss your academic plan, selection of courses, applicability of financial aid, and ultimate transfer of credit with your home institution prior to departure for the program. The credits you earn on your program will be recorded on a standard Temple University transcript. If you are not a Temple student, your official transcript will be sent directly to your home institution free of charge following the conclusion of the program.
PROGRAM SERVICES

Pre-departure Preparations
Once accepted, we provide you with detailed materials designed to guide you in preparing for your time abroad.

Pre-departure materials include:
• Cultural preparation ideas and resources
• Course registration materials
• Passport information and visa application instructions (if applicable)
• Travel and arrival information
• Health and safety information
• Medical insurance coverage details
• Housing information and housing request
• Billing information with confirmed tuition, program fees, and payment policies

Orientations
A pre-departure orientation program is conducted in Philadelphia, and an online version of the orientation is available for students who do not live in the Philadelphia area. Further orientation takes place upon arrival abroad.

Housing Placement
Housing is guaranteed for all program participants. Types of accommodations vary by program; details are available on our website.

Passports and Visas
A passport is required for all programs. In addition, many countries require you to obtain a visa for summer study. If required, information on the visa application process will be provided to you after acceptance to the program.

A passport is required as part of any visa application process, so if you do not have a valid passport, you should apply for one immediately. All students are expected to have a passport within two weeks of program acceptance. For information on obtaining or renewing a U.S. passport, visit http://travel.state.gov/passport.

Health Insurance
All Temple study abroad participants will have international health insurance coverage through HTH Worldwide. Education Abroad will obtain the insurance on your behalf, and the cost will appear on your program bill.

While all program participants will have coverage through HTH Worldwide, be sure to maintain your U.S. health insurance coverage for your time abroad. More detailed insurance information will be provided to accepted students.

Emergency Services
In the event of an emergency overseas, all students on a Temple University study abroad program also have access to 24-hour assistance through International SOS. International SOS services help students with travel and security information when away from home.
COSTS, FINANCIAL AID and SCHOLARSHIPS

Program and Housing Deposits
Upon acceptance to a summer program, a $200 non-refundable program deposit will be due within two weeks to confirm your participation. If you choose Temple-arranged housing (mandatory for some programs and optional for others; refer to the program descriptions online for specifics), a $200 non-refundable housing deposit will be required by the deadline set for your program. Both deposits will be credited to your account.

Financial Aid

Temple Students
Temple students are eligible to apply for financial assistance through regular university channels. For summer study, this includes submitting a separate summer financial aid application to Student Financial Services. You should discuss available aid and confirm summer aid application procedures directly with Student Financial Services.

Non-Temple Students
Students from other institutions should first consult with financial aid officers and study abroad advisors on their own campuses to find out which sources of aid are available to them and must apply for financial aid through their own institutions. Federal and state financial aid are transferable to Temple study abroad programs with approval of your home institution.

Note: In many cases, federal guidelines limit the types of aid available to students taking less than six credits during the summer. It may be possible to apply for other types of aid with less than six credits, such as alternative loans. Students should confirm the rules with their home institutions.

Scholarships

Education Abroad Scholarships
A limited number of scholarships are available for Temple students and are awarded on the basis of academic merit and financial need. Scholarships up to $2,500 are awarded for the Tokyo Summer Semester; for all other programs, scholarships are awarded in amounts ranging from $1,000-$2,000. Visit our website for scholarship eligibility requirements and application procedures.

Freeman Foundation East Asia Internship Program Scholarships
Thanks to a grant from the Freeman Foundation, Temple University is able to award additional scholarship funding to study abroad students participating in the Temple University, Japan Campus internship program. Students participating in summer internships may apply for scholarships up to $5,000, with preference given to Temple students. For more information, including eligibility requirements, visit our website.

Gilman Scholarships
Gilman Scholarships provide awards for study abroad to U.S. citizens who are receiving Pell Grants. Selected recipients are awarded up to $5,000 to defray the costs associated with studying abroad. For more information, visit www.iie.org/gilman.

Additional Scholarship Information
For more detailed information about these and other funding sources, visit the Scholarships section of the Education Abroad website at www.temple.edu/studyabroad/scholarships.html. Please be aware that the awarding of a scholarship may have an impact on the financial aid awarded to you by your institution. Please contact your financial aid office if you have any questions about this.

Cost of Attendance
You will be billed regular Temple University tuition based on residency, plus fees to cover other program costs. For estimated costs of each program, please refer to the relevant program description on our website. Confirmed tuition and fees and estimates for out-of-pocket expenses will be included in the pre-departure information provided to all participants.
PROGRAM ELIGIBILITY

Temple University study abroad programs are open to qualified students matriculated at any U.S. college or university.

Eligibility for all summer programs is limited to those students who:

- possess a minimum 2.5 cumulative GPA on a 4.0 scale from all colleges/universities attended.
- are enrolled as full-time matriculated students at the time of application as well as during the spring semester prior to studying abroad.
- intend a full-time program of study while abroad and will be applying credits earned toward a degree.
- are in good academic standing; students on academic probation or warning are ineligible to participate. Students who have been found responsible for a code of conduct violation on more than one occasion will be subject to additional review and may not be eligible to participate.

Certain programs have additional eligibility requirements; please refer to the individual program description online.

Students will be selected mainly on the basis of their intellectual purpose and emotional maturity.

APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS and PROCEDURES

Before Beginning an Application

Please review all program-specific information online, including eligibility, before beginning an application. All applicants are advised to discuss their plans to study abroad with their academic advisor. Non-Temple students should confirm study abroad procedures with their home institution before beginning an application.

Please note that the following submissions will be required. If you are applying online, all application requirements will appear within the online application system.

Submissions for All Applicants:

- One academic recommendation from a faculty member who has recently taught you in class. Note: Students applying to the Rome Graduate Seminar in Aesthetics and Cultural Studies are not required to submit an academic recommendation but are asked within the application to provide the names and contact information of two faculty members who can speak on behalf of their work.

Application

From our website homepage (www.temple.edu/studyabroad), navigate to the page for the specific summer program to which you are applying. Click on the “Apply Online” link or download a paper application to begin.

Additional Submissions for Non-Temple Students:

- Official transcripts from all colleges/universities attended to date. While we accept summer program applications during the fall semester, acceptance to a program is provisional until grades from the fall semester are posted to your Temple University has a long history of commitment to international education and to study abroad in particular. We created our first program in Paris in 1950, a summer program that is still active today. Our Temple Rome program, founded in 1966, has developed into a vibrant study abroad center hosting over 500 students per year for semester and summer programs. Another major milestone was the establishment of Temple University Japan in 1982, what is today a thriving branch campus with both undergraduate and graduate level programs.

Throughout the years, Temple has encouraged faculty to develop and lead programs around the world to provide additional opportunities for students; many of our dedicated faculty have continued their programs year after year.

We in Temple Education Abroad are proud to carry out Temple’s commitment to study abroad by continually developing and strengthening study abroad programming not only for Temple students but for the hundreds of students from other U.S. colleges and universities who participate in our programs each year.

We take pride in providing quality advising, thorough pre-departure preparation, and timely, individualized support for students as they prepare to go abroad.

As a public institution, we are committed to keeping our programs as cost-effective as possible while maintaining high standards for academics and cultural integration, as well as student safety, health and support. We are able to achieve this by drawing upon our many resources abroad as well as those of Temple University’s Main Campus.

Thank you for your interest in our programs, and we look forward to working with you.

Temple University is committed to a policy of equal opportunity for all in every aspect of its operation. The university has pledged not to discriminate on the basis of race, color, gender, sexual orientation, age, religion, national origin, disability, marital status or veteran status. This policy extends to all educational, service, and employment programs of the university.

The Office of Multicultural Affairs at Temple has these inclusive objectives: To support the admission and successful participation of disadvantaged students, students with disabilities, and those for whom English is a second language. To employ and advance in employment qualified women, minorities, individuals with disabilities, Armed Forces service medal veterans, disabled veterans, recently separated veterans, and other protected veterans.

Temple University’s equal opportunity/affirmative action program complies with federal regulations such as: The Civil Rights Act of 1964, Executive Order 11246, the Education Amendments of 1972, Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and the Americans with Disabilities Act. For more information or to review Temple University’s Affirmative Action Program, contact Rhonda L. Brown, Associate Vice President for Multicultural Affairs, Main Campus, Mitten Hall. 215-204-7303 (TTY 215-204-6772). Or visit the website: www.temple.edu/omca.
